Ups and Downs.

Ups and Downs.

In early days, when time was young
And earth was in its May,
Two primal creatures met and joined
Tegether in childish play,
And one was Mergury and one was Coal;
Friendship they swore together;
On a tester board they laughed and played
Through bright and storing weather.
And ever since they've played the game
Through fortune's smile and frown,
And that is the reason that Coal goes up
When Mercury goes down.

EVANGELIST BRICK.

Away up in the mountains, at Bol der, our sources of spiritual enlightenment were very limited indeed. In the first place, we were so far away from civilization that it is more than probable that not one missionary in two dozen knew of our existence. Secondly, as there were no ladies in Bolder, hence no sewing circles, ministers who craved society of a more refined sort than that of Sam Hiles' poker room were inclined to fight shy of us.

Once or twice, to be sure, we had had, for a brief period in each instance, a minister all to ourselves. The first one was a brand new, very zealous, weak eyed, scholarly, studious and shy young haan, with a Bostonese method of handling the king's English. But this one was not happy. He might have been a star of the first magnitude at a ladies' Browning club, but at Bolder he was as much out of place as the proverbial cat in a strange garret. He seemed to care little for the society of his fellow beings, at least those in Bolder. The boys tried to make him feel at home, and every once in a while some one would ask him to drink, but he never did. So it came to pass that his life grew burdensome, because the boys called him "Sis," and paid about as much attention to him as if he had been a tailor's dummy. But when Hill Tobias, the big, kindly wit of the camp, on hearing the reverend cough one day, said: "Sonny, ye've got th' croup, an' of I wuz you Pd go right back for my folks." It settled "Rev. Sis," and next day he took the stage back to civilization.

The other one was not with us oven as long as "Sis." He came a month after "Sis" left and stayed about three weeks. He was a big, over-fed, canting sort of a chap and talked "shop" too much out of business hours. One morning something broke about the engine at the Highland mine, and Wallace, the manager, used cuss words right in the presence of Rev. Obadiah Sweet, who then and the presence of Rev. Obadiah Sweet, who then and the presence of Rev. Obadiah Sweet, who then dozen knew of our existence. Sec-ondly, as there were no ladies in Belanger, used cuss words right in the presence of Rev. Obadiah Sweet, who then and there began—just began—a long discourse on swearing by way of reproof. I only heard one side of the story, and that was Wallace's version. It seems that he took Rev. Sweet by the shoulders, abused him roundly as a welf in shoor? abused him roundly as a wolf in sheep's attire, and smote him with more or less violence with the toe of his miner's boot. And Rev. Sweet walked ten miles down to Redwood to wait for the stage.

One day, however, a man—an evangelist—came and stayed a week, and in Bolder society were wrought great changes, most notable of which was the converson of Brick Yates, one of the toughest, most profane men in the camp. It was the fourth or fifth night of the evangelist's stay. He had exhorted as only a true man, with his heart in his work, can, and finally asked all those who wanted to heaven Christians to work, can, and many assets who wanted to become Christians to come forward and take a front seat.

There was a moment's silence. Then

There was a moment's silence. Then arose Brick Yates, who had at first done all he could to hinder the work, and his great voice growled: "I'll jest go ye!" And he went up, followed by a dozen "bad" ones.

Redwood came up and invaded the sanctuary. They were all tough, but behaved protty well until they discovread that they were getting very dry. Then, in the most carnest part of Rev. Haywood's discourse, they rose and started to march over to Hiles's. Mr. Haywood stopped speaking and looked at them in mute appeal, but Brick was equal to the emergency. As the Red-wood crawd came clumping to the decrease. equal to the emergency. As the Red-wood crowd came clumping to the door he rose, and, in a hearse whisper heard by every one, exclaimed: "Here! Whatinell d'you fellers mean by dis-turbin' these here percedin's? Go back an' set down till the rev'ren gits through. Plenty time ter drink. Hear me?"

me?"
They heard and went back to their seats, and every one of them put $5 in the hat.

Henceforth Brick was Bolder's sole spiritual physician. He was also dector, nurse and general consoler to all the rough population of the camp. At the start though he did not stop taking an occasional drink he quit gambling and getting drunk, and gradually broke himself of using strong cuss words, and getting drunk, and gradually broke himself of using strong cuss words, though a few of the milder once he never did get rid of. At first a few unconverted ones made fun him. But he always took it all good naturedly, and they seeing he was in earnest soon let him alone.

When a chap called "Charlie Ross" in some unaccountable way held four kings in a little game wherein another king was held by Buck Penrose, and lingered for five or six days afterward with a .44 bullet inside of him up, Brick Yates was the one who picked him up and carried him homeand nursed him tenderly till he died, and Brick it was who performed the last rites, preaching a brief, but forcible, homily on the advantages of strict honesty.

When little Sherburne, assayer at the When little Sherburne, assayer at the Highland, was sick with mountain fever, it was Brick who stopped work and stayed by his bedside three weeks, and who took the lad's body to Leadville and shipped it home. And when George Hawley, who had been Brick's enemy for many years, hovered between life and death for ten days, as the result of an accident at the Columbia shafthouse, it was Yates who nursed him and brought him back from the jaws of death, a bit crippled, but strong enough to work and grateful almost to worship.

death, a bit crippled, but strong enough to work and grateful almost to worship. But the English company operating the Highland mine shipped in one day a lot of Cornish miners—rough, brutish, ignorant fellows, far different from the splendid boys whom the crazy fresks of the manager who succeeded Wallace had forced to quit work. From this time on Brick's work was hard, but he never faltered. All the old residents were his staunch friends, but with these loutish Cornishmen he could establish no peace, though he did all for Brick had begun to read a chapter of the good book over the grave when there was a commotion, and he looked up to see what was the matter. Four or five drunken Cornishmen, the Four or five drunken Cornishmen, the worst characters at the Highland, came through the crowd, headed by Evan Evans, the leader of the last night's riot. They stalked up to Brick, but he continued his reading. Evans raised his big, dirty hand and struck the Bible from Yates' grasp. A dozen hands reached for revolvers, but Brick raised his hand as a command to refrain.

"Evans," he said slowly, "you are in-terferin' wi' th' work of God, but let us have no words. Cense this here trouble an' go your way." And he again reached for the Bible, but had hardly taken held of it when Evans raised his heavy boot and kicked the preacher's lowered arm. Brick was very pule as, the other Cornishmen having been forced by the crowd to take their dead leader and leave, he continued the service.

When he had finished he looked around and said quietly: "Fr'en's, I'm sorry. Tell them chaps I'll preach the sermon over Evans, of they say so."

Palling Off a Log.

Falling off a Log.

"As easy as falling off a log" is an old saying. When it was first uttered nobody knows. Nothing is easier, unless it is the taking of a dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These act like magic. No griping or drenching follows, as is the case with the old-fashioned pills. The relief that follows resembles the action of nature in her happlest moods; the impulse given to the dormant liver is of the most salutary kind, and is speedily manifested by the disappearance of all bilious symptoms. Sick headache, wind on the stomach, pain through the right side and shoulder-blade, and yellowness of the skin and cycloballs are speedily remedied by the Pellets.

La Grippe Successfully Treated.

La Grippe Successfully Treated.

"I have just recovered from a second attack of the grip this year," says Mr. James O. Jones, publisher of the Leader, Mexia, Texas. "In the latter case I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and I think with considerable success, only being in bed a little over two days, against ten days for the first attack. The second attack I am satisfied would have been equally as bad as the first but for the use of this remedy, as I had to go to bed in about six heurs after to go to bed in about six hours after being 'struck' with it, while in the first case I was able to attend to business about two days before getting 'down.'"

Which will yo have? It does seem as if some folks prefer to have the last condition of the liver rather than the first. They perpetually does themselves with purgatives totally without virtue as alterative of liver trouble. Hostetter's Stomach litters is the successful candidate for the people's choice, and yet, popular and well known as it is, there are unfortunates who keep on trying the drastic remedies of former days. It is to the intelligent portion of the public that the well known and long tried properties of the litters appeal. Reason should be guided by experience in the matter of medication. "The best guide to our feet is the lamp of experience," said a great partfor of the early revolutionary period, and the exclamation is pregnant with truth. For over a third of a centary the litters daily has met with the endorsoment of people suffering from liver complaint, malaria, constipation, rheumatism, debility and troubles accompanied by drspeppial. Latterly it has declared itself and been thoroughly approved as a romedy for "la grippa."
